

The milk house of Harry Swartley, below Aldan, was destroyed and seventy-five big stacks of cow fodder were carried for a long distance in the air and deposited in Eden Cemetery. Another queer freak on Swartley's farm was that one of his milk wagons was carried in the air and lodged between two trees, where it still remains. William Walters, a trucker, had 200 hot bed sash carried off by winds.

Aldan borough was also hit hard by

Clipped By:

rfellmanjr

Sat, Apr 7, 2018